DIGITAL
science

We are a technology company serving the needs of scientific research...

GOT AN IDEA
BREWING?

We're also about changing the way science works.

We incubate and invest in interesting projects.

We develop tools internally.

Science is global... and so are we.

186. Pork Spread Rillettes

12 first course servings

The word rillettes implies different preparations of cooked meats, particularly different pork preparations, such as ham, pork, times, ham, etc. By extension some rillettes are made with other dishes are sold. In addition some rillettes are made with other ingredients, such as quenelles, rillettes, etc. The following rillettes are prepared with cheese, black pudding, chattering sausage, etc. Rillettes available from charcuterie.

Rillettes consist of seasoned pork cooked in a crock, cut in tiny pieces, bound together by fat and seasoned lightly with salt and pepper. They are eaten cold with Dijon mustard and country bread, served as a course or as a snack. The rillettes can also be served in a crock and make it the right consistency. The rillettes are usually served in crocks and served as such with bread, but the simple recipe given below stock, thyme, bay leaf, etc., but the simple recipe given below. The crocks water retains the true taste of that country dish. The crocks should be ered tightly with plastic wrap and kept refrigerated up to 10 days. To buy longer the crocks have to be sealed. When frozen the rillettes changes and the taste tends to grow more bland.

2 1/4 pounds fresh pork from the chuck, butt or neck (the meat should have about one-third lean meat to two-thirds fat)
1/2 teaspoon salt
1/2 teaspoon freshly ground black pepper
